How To Give Quinine To Children.

FEBRILINE is the trade-mark name given to an improved Quinine. It is a Tasteless Syrup, pleasant to take and does not disturb the stomach.

Children take it and never know it is Quinine. Also especially adapted to adults who cannot take ordinary Quinine. Does not cause nausea or cause nervousness nor ringing in the head. Try it the next time you need Quinine for any purpose. Ask for 3-ounce original package. The name FEBRILINE is blown in bottle. 25 cents.

other bidders for the contract among whom were Williams and Thornton, W. A. Webster and Clint Ehrig. One of the unsuccessful bidders bid was something like fifty dollars a year less than that of the bid accepted.

KATY FARM AGENT HERE.

T. M. Jeffords, agricultural agent of the Katy railroad, is spending a few days in Durant and Bryan county looking over the crop conditions and gathering general information of value to his road along this line. He states that although in some sections of the county crops are needing rain, that the outlook generally is fine.

DROPPED DEAD IN HIS ROOM AT MAIN HOTEL.

Frank Gordon, a Horse Trainer Dies Suddenly of Heart Failure After Drinking Lemon Extract. The Remains Unclaimed by Relatives.

Frank Gordon, aged about fifty-five, a horse trainer by occupation, Thursday afternoon, of heart failure, which was probably brought on by his drinking large quantities of lemon extract. In his pockets were found a cheap watch, several empty extract bottles were found near his bed. He had been complaining of not feeling well and had been lying down, and had gotten up and started to put on his shoes when he fell dead. Gordon is not very well known here, and has been here but a short time, and has been engaged in training some of Ed Loves horses at the fair grounds.

The remains were carried to the Durant Furniture Company's undertaking rooms, where they were embalmed and held until relatives would claim the body, which had not been done up to the time the Advertiser went to press. He has a brother living at Foraker, Oklahoma, it is thought, and other relatives near Hugo.

Gordon was a very large and powerful man physically and was thought to be in vigorous health, until he died suddenly.

RULING ON TEACHERS' CONTRACTS.

State Superintendent R. L. Wilson has secured a ruling from the Attorney General on the law that requires the signature of the County Superintendent to a contract with a county school teacher. There has been some misapprehension among school teachers and school boards to the effect that the County Superintendent has arbitrary power in the employment of teachers. The opinion clears this up and makes it plain that this is not the case. The theory is that by having the contract signed by the County Superintendent the board may secure his advice and be able to guard them against making a contract with a teacher who has failed to make good in another district.

"THE LEE-HUCKINS."

When a person goes away from and puts up at a hotel, tavern or rooming house, he pays for a variety of things, but what he desires most of all is service. And service is that indefinable efficiency and spirit which enters into everything. It is a thing hard to define, but instantly recognized the moment you come in contact with it. It's not so much good meals and a place to sleep as it is a spirit of welcome, of comfort, of a desire to please, and hope that you'll come back again some time.

Oklahoma has one hostility where this attitude of service, this desire to give your money's worth and a little more for all you spend, stands out in bold relief all over the place. That's The Lee-Huckins Hotel in Oklahoma City. The management seems to try to give you just a little more than you expect for your money, and makes its purpose clear in a number of kindly, unobtrusive ways.

Where else in Oklahoma or any state, if you please, can you secure a room with bath at $1 per day? Nowhere that we know of. And suppose the room don't suit you, you want to change. The clerk at the desk will go out of his way to satisfy you, even though you be one of those unreasonable, cranky individuals who kick on everything. When you reach your room, you'll find pen, paper, ink and stationery ready to your hand. In the bottom drawer of your dresser you'll find wrapping paper, string, a hat bag, and other little conveniences. If you want to phone anywhere, you can do it from your room. There's even a shoe shining cloth in the lavatory. If you room is uncomfortable, (and some hotel rooms are bound to be in hot weather) an electric fan will be supplied you on application at the desk. Charge for it? No, it's service, that's all. If you want ice water, and phone to the office, you get it in a stanter—you don't have to wait an hour or so!

In a thousand and one little details, too numerous to set out, the Lee-Huckins makes you understand that you are welcome, that they desire your patronage and are glad you came, and want to give you the very best there is in the shop. We couldn't say just how if we tried; but it's in the atmosphere, it's the spirit of the place. And that's the reason that it has the best patronage in the state; a clientele of friends and boosters you can't take away from it. And so long as it maintains that spirit of service it will get the patronage, no matter what other grander finer structures may be erected.—Altus Times.

But the time has now come when manufacturer and distributor can feel that underlying conditions are sound, that the cause of the protracted pessimism was more apparent than real, and that a new era of trade expansion is not now distant.

Cotton is in every sense a world commodity. It is produced in many countries and consumed in all. World-wide conditions control its value.

Now that both Europe and America have passed through periods of severe liquidation, many facts of life should begin to exert normal influence in the cotton market.

The short interest in cotton, in mill supplies, small general reserves and reduced stocks of goods.

Against this short interest the American crop, which is the chief dependence, in turn dependent on ideal weather throughout the remainder of July and all of August, after an unfavorable start over a very large area.

The underwriter who would safely guess the future will do well to stake good money in a most conservative way only until more is known of the fate of the American crop.

CONFIDENCE

Confidence is one of the greatest elements in modern business, and probably the greatest factor that enters into successful, safe and sound banking, as carried on in the present age.

J. P. Morgan, one of the greatest financiers that the world has ever known, once said, "I have loaned men as much as a million dollars upon their plain note, knowing that they had not a dollar in the world, and I have refused small loans to other men on unquestioned security. I would not loan a dollar." Confidence waives on all the securities in Wall Street to a man I do not trust the greatest factor in the success of Morgan.

The confidence in which this bank is held by the United States Government is explained in the action of the Federal Reserve Board in selecting this bank as one in five out of seven hundred and twenty-five banks in District Eleven, to assist in the organization of the Federal Reserve Bank at Dallas.

This bank appreciates the business of the small as well as the large depositors and is anxious at all times to extend favors to its depositors that may be consistent with good business.
